Fall 2003 – the Rolling Stones are playing the final shows of their 'Licks' 2002/03 world tour. The band has been on the road for over a year, playing three different shows in sold-out stadiums, arenas and theatres around the world. Cameras rolled – at the shows, backstage and behind-the-scenes... and this is your all-access pass!

On previous tours we've only done one or two theatre shows. On this tour we've done enough to re-learn how to play to this kind of audience, and it's become one of my favourite experiences on the whole tour.
Mick Jagger

When you are designing the shows, the stadium has to come first. You have to dream up something incredible in size and scale. On this tour, that something was the huge screens. The stadium and arena shows were built around the screens.
Charlie Watts

The shows have all had a great feel to them. There has been a party atmosphere in all the venues – and a wonderful feeling of intimacy, no matter how big the crowd is.

Ronnie Wood

Being on stage is fun. It's gotta be fun, man. You can't go up there thinking 'yeah, another day at the office'... although we do joke about it while we're driving there.

Keith Richards

A photograph of the four members of The Rolling Stones performing on stage. From left to right: Mick Jagger in a red t-shirt and jeans, Keith Richards in a black t-shirt with a red and white 'Toro' logo and jeans, Darryl Hall in a tan jacket over a white shirt, and Charlie Watts in a dark blue jacket over a white shirt. They are all smiling and looking towards the right. The background is dark with some stage lights visible.

We thought that playing the three different venues would be more interesting. More interesting for the band because we wouldn't be locked into playing one kind of venue. We could change the set lists around and not play the same songs over and over again. More interesting for the audience, because they could make a choice as to what kind of show they would like to go to.
Mick Jagger

We have very nice people with us. That makes the whole difference. We are very fortunate. We know each other so well. You have to live with them. Having people like Darryl and Lisa with us... it makes all the difference.
Charlie Watts

*We've got a band that can play.
Man. We've got the most beautiful band in the world.
'Cause its not just us, its all of them... the horns, Cisa, Blondie, Bernard, Chuck and Darryl...
we've been together a while now.
Its just a pleasure to play with the whole damn lot of them.*
Keith Richards

*This DVD tunes right in to the band as we are operating now... its exactly what the Rolling Stones are today... and...
God knows where it is all going to go from here!*
